

PUBLIC ACCESS TO CADW-AIDED BUILDINGS

Plas Carew, Unit 5/7 Cefn Coed, Parc Nantgarw,
Cardiff CF15 7QQ

Cadw carries out the statutory responsibilities of the Welsh Assembly Government to protect, conserve and promote an appreciation of the built heritage of Wales.

Preface

Cadw carries out the statutory functions of the Welsh Government with regard to the historic environment. Cadw's role is to protect, conserve and promote an appreciation of the historic environment of Wales — the physical remains of our past, ranging from prehistoric caves, through the castles and abbeys of the Middle Ages, to industrial works and domestic dwellings of the Victorian period and later. It includes not only large houses but also modest vernacular cottages, features such as coastal defence works, parks, gardens and landscapes as well as structures such as bridges, lighthouses and watermills.

Preserving our heritage is highly relevant to the present. It is important not only in giving us an understanding of our past and a sense of belonging but also in contributing to the country's economic and social development and to the Government's sustainability agenda. The value of the built heritage to tourism is well appreciated, as is the presentation of important educational experiences to new generations. The repair and re-use of vacant historic properties and the use of traditional materials in schemes of repair and restoration can also be valuable by stimulating the economic and social regeneration of depressed areas.

Public interest in the built heritage continues to grow and visitor numbers to Cadw and National Trust sites are high. Local community groups have initiated civic schemes or established building preservation trusts to bring new life to historic buildings which have been neglected or vandalized.

Cadw gives grant aid for the repair or restoration of outstanding historic buildings, and for the conservation of scheduled ancient monuments. Normally it is a condition of grant that the owner or occupier should allow some degree of public access to the property. Some — such as National Trust properties — are open for much of the year as a matter of course, whereas, in general, private houses which have been grant-aided can be seen by appointment, and perhaps on certain days of the year specified by the owner.

This right of access does not, however, last indefinitely. In the case of historic buildings grant, it is Cadw's practice that the condition remains in force for a period of ten years from the date of the first payment of grant.

This booklet provides information on buildings and sites which have been grant-aided by Cadw and can be visited by the public. The date upon which the access requirement will expire is indicated. Also included is information on sites to which the public may not enjoy a right of access, but can view from a public way.

The levels of access to historic buildings and ancient monuments are indicated by the following codes:

- access 1 — these buildings (such as National Trust properties) can be visited as a matter of course, and are open for 30 days or more each year;
- access 2 — there is a right of access to these buildings, but it needs to be exercised by appointment with the owner;
- access 3 — the interiors of these buildings can be viewed by reason of their use — for example, churches and chapels;
- access 4 — the exteriors of these buildings are their most important feature and can be seen from the street;
- access 5 — arrangements for visiting these buildings will be displayed outside the building;

- access 6 — these monuments can be seen from a public right of way;
- access 7 — there is access to these monuments but it must be arranged with the occupier since the surrounding land will generally be in use;
- access 8 — all or part of the monument is open to the public.

If you have any difficulty in exercising the rights of access which are indicated in this booklet — perhaps because you are unable to make contact with the owner or occupier, or because unreasonable constraints are put upon the opportunity to visit — please contact Cadw on 01443 336061, 01443 336058 (Anne Thomas and Lynda Rose) in the case of historic buildings and 01443 336095 (Richard Kevern) in the case of ancient monuments.

Cadw also advises the HM Revenue and Customs on buildings in Wales which are preserved and made available to the public in return for exemption from Inheritance Tax or Capital Gains Tax.

A NOTE ON GRANTS

Cadw is the Welsh Assembly Government's historic environment service. It is responsible for Wales's built heritage. Cadw makes grant offers under section 4 of the Historic Buildings and Ancient Monuments Act 1953 or section 24 of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979.

All grant applications under the 1953 Act are considered by the Historic Buildings Advisory Council for Wales. The Council is the statutory independent body on historic buildings in Wales and advises the Welsh Assembly Government on the exercise of the functions vested in it. The Council judges whether or not a building is of outstanding historic or architectural interest, the criterion for assistance under the 1953 Act. It also considers the urgency and nature of the proposed works before making a recommendation to the Welsh Assembly Government regarding the grant. In the case of applications from commercial owners, Cadw takes account of the need for financial support to ensure that the necessary repairs are carried out. Grant is directed at works of repair or restoration — alterations to properties are not eligible for assistance.

Generally, ancient monument grants assist with the funding of works to preserve, maintain or manage ancient monuments. The primary aim of such schemes is to conserve monuments but, where appropriate, grant assistance may also be used to offset the cost of the interpretation of a monument or for works which will facilitate its better management.

If you would like more information on the availability of grants please contact Lynda Rose on 01443 33 6058 or Anne Thomas on 01443 33 6061 in the case of historic buildings, and Matthew Coward on 01443 336095 for ancient monuments.

METAL DETECTORS

While encouraging greater public access to sites of archaeological importance, Cadw emphasizes that the use of a metal detector on a scheduled ancient monument is illegal unless the Welsh Assembly Government has authorized such activity.
